

Your roof can leak in the desert, too

by Lori Luschei

When it rains, it pours; when it rains at WSMR, it leaks too. According to Col. Francis R. Geisel, director of Facilities Engineering, "The vast majority of buildings at WSMR are susceptible to leaks." The causes of the leaks are various.

Because of Army economics and cost reductions, WSMR buildings have been built with flat roofs. This makes it "very difficult to locate the leaks, especially in dry weather," Geisel said. "Flat roofs tend to bow and water ponds in the weakest point, causing interior stains." High winds and high temperatures add to the problem. Geisel calls the problem "frustrating."

The leaks are hard to locate because once the leak has stopped, it is hard to determine how the water could have gotten in. Water leaks in along major outlets such as air conditioning ducts and pipes. Infrequent rain makes leaks hard to trace and repairs in dry weather virtually impossible.

The problem of repairing these leaks stems from the lack of funds available to make major repairs. There is a Backlog of Maintenance and Repair (BEMAR) project that involves half a million dollars in roof repairs waiting to be done.

The Facilities Engineers handle funding of repairs, but separate funds and the lack of them make major repairs a thing of the future.

Separate funding involves money channeled from FE for office buildings. Family Housing management provides funding for roof repair of family housing.

Last year, almost $1½ million was spent on roof repair. Most of this work was done on "quick fix emergency repairs," such as in the housing areas, Geisel said.

Major repairs were done on 19 large buildings. About $9,000 was spent for complete re-roofing of the Commanding General's house and $3,000 to $5,000 in emergency repair work was done on family housing.

Roof repair can be an expensive undertaking. For example, the cost of roof repairs for the ARMTE Engineer Test Lab building was estimated at $206,000.

In total backlog funding, almost $8 million is needed for overall repair projects. These include roof repair, painting, and road repair. A little over $1 million is needed in backlog roof repairs alone.

Geisel explained that "the building with the highest need will be top on the list," and he will determine those repairs with the highest priority. Geisel added that the repair backlog list at FE is always available to the public.

Plans for backlog projects have already been drawn up; all this is needed is the funding. Project work will be divided between the Army Corps of Engineers and WSMR's FE.

WSMR residents and employees can report leaking roofs to FE. In most cases, same-day emergency services are provided by the FE carpenter shop. Reports can be called in to 678-1116 or 678-1623.

Monday space shot

An Aries research rocket similar to this one will loft a telescope 160 miles above WSMR Monday to observe a quasar in the constellation Virgo. The quasar is three billion light years (about 18 sextillion miles) from Earth.

Telescope to take 18 sextillion mile peek

by Jim Bryant

A scientific payload scheduled for launch by the Naval Ordnance Missile Test Facility (NOMTF) at WSMR Monday night will observe a stellar phenomenon three billion light years from Earth.

Dr. Arthur Davidsen, professor of physics at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, is the principal investigator for the experiment. Davidsen said the payload will survey the ultraviolet spectrum of a quasar in the constellation Virgo.

A light year is the distance light can travel in one year, about 5.9 trillion miles. The quasar that will be observed Monday night is about 18 sextillion (18 followed by 21 zeros) miles from Earth.

Quasars are highly powerful energy sources in deep space first noticed by astronomers in the early 1960's. They were at first called "quasi-stellar objects" (soon shortened to "quasars") because the astronomers thought the objects might be stars. The nature of these celestial bodies remains, for the most part a mystery.

To study the Virgo quasar, known as Quasar 3C273, a telescope featuring a 36-inch mirror will be boosted to an altitude of about 160 miles by an Aries research rocket scheduled for launch at 10:30 Monday night. The launch will be from the Aries pad at Launch Complex 36.

One of the largest rockets fired from WSMR, the 30-foot Aries will be visible from El Paso, Las Cruces, and Alamogordo during its flight, if the night is clear.

Researchers expect to gain about five minutes of observation time when the Aries reaches its apogee (highest altitude). In addition to the 36-inch mirror, the payload will also carry television camera that will aim the payload's on-board telescope precisely.

Davidsen said the payload's mirror will reflect into spectrograph (a device that analyses light waves) and provide a digital read-out of the ultraviolet spectrum. Further use of the payload is scheduled during a Space Shuttle mission in early 1985.

In addition to Johns Hopkins University and the Navy at WSMR, other support for the experiment is being provided by NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center at Greenbelt, Md.

Ed's Hogwash

Leaving Calif. has its compensations

by Ed White

I'm not a member of the local Chamber of Commerce, but I brag a lot about southern New Mexico weather. Since I was born and reared in northern California, where approximately 70 inches of rain is measured each year, the dry climate here suits me to a "T."

I haven't owned a yellow slicker raincoat and pointy fireman-like rain hat since leaving the rain forests of southern Oregon and northern California as a teenager. If luck holds, I'll never again own extensive rain gear.

As a youngster I could don rain gear, including knee-high rubber boots, faster than most firemen can suit up. At home rain gear was kept on the back porch, and everybody had his gear set up "just so." We "practiced" suiting up and shedding the rain gear from early fall to late spring.

While slipping on my rain coat, I would step into my boots and reach for the rain hat. I could be fully buttoned and ready to "slosh" when the bottom porch step was heeled. When indoors during the rainy season we wore heavy socks or slippers and sweaters.

As a youngster I didn't know there was another mode of living. Guess I thought everyone had webbed feet, a rain-down-the-neck-attitude, built-in puddle radar, and mildewed sweaters and double wool socks.

As a kid I had traveled 350 miles south to San Francisco and north to the Rogue River in Oregon. The same type of rainy weather prevailed at both places.

Then the U.S. Army sent me to Europe and the Ardennes to struggle in snow up to my knees. The rain of northern California still looked good. Finally, after a stint in the snowy hills of Korea, I was sent to White Sands Missile Range in the southwest desert of New Mexico. Hope I never leave.

What a contrast. Here rain and snow is such a rarity some people actually pray for it. Recently I caught myself telling a neighbor, "Beautiful rain we had last night." Can that be rain-hating me talking?

In spite of our spring wind storms, I still enjoy the desert Southwest. When rain becomes "beautiful," I can live with it.

Disney, Paul Newman films about drugs coming to TV-6

Channel 6 has scheduled three special films during the coming viewing week. These are recent, commercially-made films dealing with drugs. The first two deal with alcohol while the third is concerned with a new popular drug called PCP, or angel dust. One film, "Understanding Alcohol Use and Abuse," was made by Walt Disney and is animated. It is recommended for both children and adults. The film on angel dust is a documentary narrated by Joanne Woodward and Paul Newman. The third film, "Francesca Baby," looks at a high school student who is forced to care for her family because of her mother's alcoholism. Check the Channel 6 schedule for the times of these informative films.

A reminder—the last showing of Billboard on Fridays is now at 4:45 p.m. instead of 4:30.

Missile Ranger now charging one dollar per classified ad

A small charge for classified ads in the Missile Ranger will be imposed by the publisher, starting with the May 1 issue.

With that issue, WSMR personnel (active and retired) and civilian employees using the now-free service will be asked to remit $1 with each ad of 20 words or less (an extra $1 will be charged for each additional 10 words or fraction thereof).

Carpool ads will continue to be published without charge.

For those desiring to do so, ads and remittances may be mailed directly to the Missile Ranger office in Las Cruces (P.O. Box 51, Las Cruces, N.M. 88004). And for the first time, ads may be placed by telephone by calling the Las Cruces office (526-4851).

An "honor system" is being established whereby those calling in ads agree to send in their remittance immediately. A 50-cent service charge will be added to phone ads. Phone ads should not be called in to the WSMR Public Affairs Office.

A secure box will replace the open box in the Public Affairs Office (Bldg. 122). A patron will need only to print his or her ad on a printed form and deposit it, along with remittance, in a drop-in box. The forms will be provided at the present desk. A printed form also will appear regularly in the Missile Ranger.

Take stock in America.

Youth Activities offers thanks

Dear Editor:

Youth Activities would like to thank the following organizations and facilities for their participation in the "Ride for Terry" bike-a-thon. Your help was greatly needed and highly appreciated: Military Police, NCO Club, Officers Wives Club, Reynolds Florist, and Roadrunner Lanes.

The bike-a-thon was successful due to your participation. Also a special thanks to the riders who should be proud of their contributions and performance. Though the number was small the outcome was outstanding.

The riders were Pat Aranowski, David Barrett, Tim Forrest, Tommy Forrest, Corey Gillespie, Chad Hoffman, Heather

Hoffman, Brian Manda, John Manda, and Frank Reeve.

We would also like to thank Mr. Warren Brown, chairman of the bike-a-thon, and Mrs. Brown, and Mrs. Joanne Winters for their outstanding participation.

The people of the Youth Activities Center

Thanks, WSMR moms and dads

To WSMR parents:

I would like to extend my appreciation to all the moms and dads for their cooperation, understanding, and patience during their visits to the Pediatrics Clinic. The year I have worked there has been a very rewarding experience for my future, and I will really miss the kids and the friends I have made when I leave May 1.

Also, special appreciation and a big "thank you" goes to Shin Lee Tennison, daughter of Sp5 Guyce E. and Mrs. Bonnie Tennison, for all of the children's books you donated.

Thank you to the Officers Wives Club for the donation of books and beautiful pinatas.

And, a personal "thank you" to Evelyn, Amy, and Michael Thompson for the delicious cookies.

Again, let me thank everyone for a fantastic year and I'm going to miss you all.

Professor makes case against 'gov't schools'

THE CASE AGAINST GOVERNMENT SCHOOLSGetting Politics Out of Education And Education Off Your Tax Bill
by

Dr. Frank E. Fortkamp

(American Media, 149 pages, $4.95)

Reviewed by F.T. Starkweather (Part II of a two-part review)(Part II begins with a quote from "The Case Against Government Schools")

"It is high time we certify graduates, rather than teachers. At the present time, teachers must be certified to teach reading in the public schools, but our teachers colleges now merrily graduate students who are functional illiterates. Imagine the Government licensing incompetent auto assembly workers while simultaneously expecting the driving public to be satisfied when the cars turn out to be functionally defective. If tax dollars were so wasted on certifying badly built cars, the cry heard coast-to-coast would deafen even the politicians....surrendering our schools to the Government is a surrender to socialism....consider the following statistics as you pay your taxes for public education:

Thirty million adult Americans are functionally incompetent. This means they cannot effectively read a want ad, fill out a job application, or perform simple arithmetic tasks!; the U.S. illiteracy rate in 1970 was three times as high as in the Soviet Union; in recent years, American students scored 21.7 percent lower in math than German youth, 25.5 percent below students in Japan, and 31 percent below their British counterparts on achievement tests!; one-third of applicants for teaching jobs in Florida in 1976 failed in eighth-grade general knowledge tests; one-third of the applicants to junior colleges in New Jersey in 1977 were functionally illiterate!" (In one of the schools I have been associated with in our school district we had an English teacher who could barely speak English—he was an art teacher who was pressed into service when the English teacher left unexpectedly. My children have had two elementary math teachers who confided to me they hated math when they were in school. My children have also had a total of three teachers who had only six hours of educational math—akin to remedial math, in my opinion—and one who hadn't had a math course since high school. For the past 30 to 40 years this nation's schools of education have believed in preparing prospective teachers in classroom technique and philosophy rather than in the subject matter they may be expected to teach on the premise that if you know how to teach you can teach anything. Which is obviously stupid theory unless you're dean of a college of education and desirous of building a bureaucratic empire.)

In anticipation of some people's reaction to this review I postscript my narrative by noting for the record that Fortkamp holds master's and doctoral degrees in educational administration, has authored a number of books and articles on education, has taught in many institutions, served as a high school principal, and is bilingual while concurrently being proficient in the sign-language of the deaf and able to read five foreign languages.

Rape seminar featured

A rape prevention seminar will be presented Tuesday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Post Theatre. The seminar will include films and a panel discussion featuring representatives of the El Paso Police Department, the El Paso Rape Crisis Center, and the Southwest Community Mental Health Center in Las Cruces.

For further information on the seminar contact Spec. Mitchell at 678-4825.

New Carlsbad Caverns hours go into effect on May 3

The National Park Service has announced that a new schedule of visitor hours will begin at Carlsbad Caverns National Park on May 3 and continue in effect through May 30 when the park's full summer schedule starts.

Under the new schedule, complete walk-in tours will be available continuously from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. each day, and Big Room tours from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Complete tours through the main cavern are three miles in length and require about three hours, while Big Room tours are one and a quarter mile long and take about an hour and a half.

Also starting on May 3 will be daily lantern tours of primitive New Cave and evening bat flight programs at the natural entrance to the main cavern. The lantern tours through New Cave, which is located 23 miles southwest of the main cavern in the Slaughter Canyon area, will be at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily. Reservations are necessary for the lantern trips and may be made by calling (505) 785-2233.

The bat flight programs at the main cavern will start at about sunset each evening and exact times can be obtained each day by calling the park visitor center at the same telephone number.

The park entrance fee is $3 per carload daily for private non-commercial vehicles or $1 per person for those entering on commercial buses. Annual Golden Eagle and Golden Age permits are also available and honored at the park. All entrance permits include use of hand-held radio receivers for listening to interpretive messages along the trail while touring the main cavern.

Concession facilities available at the park include a nursery, kennel, restaurant, gift shop, and underground lunchroom.

ACS suggests 'Mums for Mom'

WSMR military personnel and civilian workers will have an opportunity this year to honor their mothers and at the same time assist the American Cancer Society.

For the second year, the American Cancer Society will sponsor its "Mums for Mom" program. on Mother's Day (May 10), between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., volunteers from Las Cruces will deliver "Mums to Mom" and sing her a special song for a $10 donation. All proceeds from the project will go to the 1981 annual American Crusade Drive.

Lauree Ball, this year's "Mums for Mom" project officer, expects to deliver 200 sets of flowers this year. Last year only 50 flower orders were received and filled.

Orders can now be placed by calling the Cancer Society office, 522-7773, Las Cruces.

Mag for black soldiers started

Buffalo, a new magazine specifically aimed at members of the black military community, has been started in Fayetteville, N.C. Named for America's first black career military men, the Buffalo soldiers of the late 19th century, Buffalo seeks articles, photography, artwork, and poetry on the black military experience. To submit material to Buffalo or to find out more about the magazine, write to Ariel Wiley, Editor, Buffalo Magazine, P.O. Box 35606, Fayetteville, N.C. 28303.

Health tests offered

All members of the WSMR community are urged to participate in the Health and Blood Pressure Screening Program on post next Thursday and Friday. Screenings will take place in the post exchange and bowling alley, and in other convenient locations. A special program is being planned as a follow-up for those found to have health problems. Measles-mumps immunization scheduled at McAfee Clinic

A number of cases of measles have been recently diagnosed in El Paso. Two presumptive cases of measles have also been diagnosed at WSMR. After checking the exposed children's immunization records, it was found a significant number had not yet received their Measles-Mumps-Rubella (MMR) vaccination even though they were 15 months or older. Parents seeking information concerning their children's immunization status should contact the Pediatric Clinic at McAfee U.S. Army Health Clinic or their private pediatrician.

Measles is normally not a severe illness, however, complications both in children and adults do occasionally occur. Parents should watch their children and teenagers for fevers or rash. If a child develops these symptoms, the family pediatrician should be contacted. While not 100 percent effective, immunization remains the best form of protection against many childhood diseases.

Special Olympics star

WSMR resident Billy Llewellyn, 10, finished first in two events and third in another at a Special Olympics competition held recently at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces. The son of Army Maj. and Mrs. William Llewellyn, Billy dominated the competition by finishing first in the 50 meter dash, first in the standing long jump, and third in the softball throw, against about 150 other athletes. Billy has cerebral palsy. Despite the prediction of a doctor who once told the Llewellyns that their son would never be able even to ride a bicycle, the WSMR youth has gone on to become an athlete who is "terribly enthusiastic about everything," his father says. The first youth from WSMR ever to compete in the Special Olympics, Billy was sponsored by the post's Officers Wives Club. 1981 is the second year he has taken part in Special Olympics activities. William and Marilyn Llewellyn and son Billy have lived at WSMR for two years.

Today Cmdr.'s Cup deadline

The White Sands Commander's Cup golf tournament will begin at the White Sands Golf Course May 3.

The tourney will feature 18 holes of match play. There will be one match per week starting the week of May 3. There will be an 80 percent handicap.

First round losers will participate in a consolation flight. Second round losers will take part in 18 holes of stroke play.

The low net score will determine winners. Semi-finals will be played on May 24, and finals on May 25.

There is a $15 entry fee, payable at the time of entry. Participants must be members of the White Sands Golf Course with current Sun Country Golf Association handicaps.

The first 32 entrants will be allowed to play. The deadline for entries is 6 p.m. today.

Nosecone swiped- Navy comes to rescue

by Bill Gross

The U.S. Navy, often applauded for its rescue at sea, has come to the rescue of the International Space Hall of Fame, (ISHF), land-based on an Alamogordo mountainside.

Last November, Capt. James T. Lewis, commanding officer, and Lloyd Briggs, research rocket director, Naval Ordnance Missile Test Facility, (NOMTF), and Don Paterson, NASA representative for Goddard Space Flight Center, delivered a 30-foot Aerobee 150 sounding rocket to ISHF, a gift to that institution for permanent display. The missile was placed outside in the Hall's missile park, in a horizontal position.

One morning last week, ISHF officials discovered that the six-foot, 40-pound aluminum nosecone was missing. Vandalism is relatively common, but this act required a little more effort.

The nosecone attaches to the missile with 18 groupings of three each special slotted screws. Dave Brandler, ISHF plant manager, earlier tried to tighten one loose screw but unable to do this because he lacked the special screwdriver necessary to do the job.

This would indicate that whoever stole the nosecone either had or obtained the tool prior to the event. Brandler noted also that even with the proper tool, quite some time must have been required to loosen the nosecone and cart it away.

When the Aerobee was noticed the next morning minus its nosecone, ISHF officials immediately called the Navy at WSMR to see about a replacement. The request was referred to Lloyd Briggs, who responded without hesitation. "We just happen to have one on the shelf," he recalls.

ISHF officials picked up the new nosecone plus a special screwdriver the same day. Thanks to the Navy, the Aerobee 150 was ready for display a few days after discovery of the loss.

Preparations are now being made to display the high altitude research rocket vertically instead of horizontally, so it will be less vulnerable to vandalism. Meanwhile, the special screwdriver given the ISHF has been placed under lock and key, with restricted access to its location.

'Dumb girl' now OMEW engineer

by Wanda Walters
EWL

"The most important thing I ever did as far as my father is concerned was to produce a son," says Joy Lim Arthur.

Arthur is an electronic engineer with the Electronic Warfare Laboratory's (EWL) Office of Missile Electronic Warfare (OMEW) at WSMR. She is marking her 20th anniversary with the federal government.

Arthur's only brother died in childhood, an event which greatly distressed her father, Venancio Lim. As the status of Phillipine women was decidedly lower than men's and since women were considered to be "of no importance," it was a blow to Lim's pride to be deprived of a son.

"He felt cheated," says Arthur. Despite his disappointment, however, he focused all his ambitions on his younger daughter and educated her as though she had been the much-wanted son.

"If my father hadn't pushed me, I would never be an engineer now," she admits.

An alumna of Purdue University with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering and a member of the Board of Examiners for Engineers in Manila, Lim considered this field to be the only choice for a career. From the beginning he dictated his daughter's course of study. Young Joy disliked the grueling routine but she "liked even less getting low grades and having to endure the parental criticism that accompanied any show of laziness."

"Of course I'm glad that things worked out the way they did. I like my job and right now I wouldn't be anything else," Arthur says. She is working on passive electronic countermeasures at present.

While at Purdue University, Arthur met her future husband, Paul, but encountered so much parental opposition at any mention of marriage that she returned to Manila, after graduating in 1958, in hopes of obtaining her father's blessing.

Lim regarded this relationship as a misalliance. "Many Americans were marrying 'bar girls' at one time," says Arthur. "My father said that if I married an American, people would see us together and think I was a 'Pom Pom girl.' He felt this would be terribly degrading," she said.

Unable to persuade her family, Joy returned in 1959 to be married. She was petitioned as a technical scientist and allowed to return outside the established immigration quotas in effect at the time.

Despite her conservative upbringing in a strictly paternalistic and regimented society, Arthur is culturally proud and by no means subservient. "One thing that makes me furious is to see some of the Oriental women married to men who treat them like servants," she says. "I really don't know why they put up with it. When I see something like that it almost drives me into the arms of the ERA. Please note, I said 'almost.'"

The Arthurs live in Las Cruces and have two children; a daughter Lia, and a son, Gregory, who is attending Stanford University, Palo Alto, Cal. Paul Arthur is Chief of the High Altitude Air Defense Project Branch, Army Material Test and Evaluation (ARMTE), WSMR.

When it comes to long term goals Arthur is very definite. "I want to contribute something in my field that is outstanding—something in the 'chaff' field—something that long after I am gone people will remember."

Is it enough to obtain a master's degree in engineering and to achieve considerable career success in a field which has been traditionally dominated by men? Commendable, but not quite enough for Venancio Lim.

According to Arthur, after her sister married and also had a boy, Lim swept up both grandchildren in his arms and said joyfully, "This makes up for my two dumb girls."

Clock re-set affects pay

The Civilian Personnel Office has announced that employees who work shifts during the change to Daylight Savings Time (which goes into effect 2 a.m. Sunday) will be considered on duty for the normal number of hours of that shift, provided the hour lost is charged to annual leave (or sick leave, if applicable).

If no charge is made to leave, pay must be allowed only for the actual number of hours worked (i.e., 7 hours.) Similarly, when a return to Standard Time goes into effect next autumn, employees working shifts during that change will be credited and pay will be allowed for the actual number of hours worked (i.e., 9 hours).

During fiscal year 1980, federal employees in the District of Columbia were paid the highest average salary in the United States—$23,303. Civil servants in California received the lowest average salary—$15,049.

1240 S. EL PASEO

Two Marines man an M-60 machine gun near Red Canyon Range Camp in WSMR's northeast corner.

Two Marines guard a HAWK missile launcher at Dam Site near Red Canyon in the northeast section of WSMR.

This is war (sort of)

Earlier this month, 21,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines converged on the WSMR-Fort Bliss-Holloman Air Force Base area for Border Star 81, a joint U.S. military readiness exercise.

Besides service members from most of the states of the Union, the April 3-7 war game featured 150 aircraft, 2,000 cars and trucks, and 400 tracked vehicles. To the surprise of more than one grizzled veteran of large-scale military exercises like Border Star, not a single person was killed during the war game. Neither was civilian traffic seriously disrupted in an area where thousands of civilian motorists had to share the highways with the throng of war game troops.

Military officials considered the operation worthwhile in determining how U.S. military forces would perform "an integrated air defense mission," as one press release described the exercise. In an open letter to the WSMR community, post commander Maj. Gen. Alan A. Nord called Border Star 81 "an unqualified success."

SSgt. Edward A. Todd, Jr., takes a message at a radio relay van at WSMR's North Oscura Peak near NW 70 Site. Todd's mission was to support firings of "loaded" HAWK missiles at NW 70 site. Todd belongs to the 1/65th Air Defense Artillery Battalion, 11th ADA Brigade, Fort Bliss.

Air Force eye 'activated'

by Jim Bryant

Activation ceremonies were held at WSMR last week for a U. S. Air Force unit that will be in charge of the first completed site of the Ground-based Electro-optical Deep Space Surveillance (GEODSS) system when it becomes operational sometime this autumn.

GEODSS, when in full operation, will be a network of five worldwide sites designed to monitor satellites in deep space.

The Air Force unit in charge of the WSMR site is Detachment One of the First Strategic Aerospace Division. Operating out of Socorro, on WSMR's north end, the unit will be responsible for command, quality assurance, and contract monitoring at the local GEODSS site. This detachment will replace a unit of the 12th Air Division when the site becomes operational. The Air Force has been operating a deep space experimental test system next to the new GEODSS facility since 1976.

The WSMR facility is the first link in a planned GEODSS network which will provide information to the North American Defense Operations Center in Colorado. The sites will track satellites between 3,000 and 23,000 miles from Earth. GEODSS is being developed for the Air Force Electronics Systems Division (ESD) by TRW, Inc. The equipment will be operated and maintained by RCA contractor personnel.

The other GEODSS sites are planned to be built in Korea, Hawaii, the Indian Ocean, and the eastern Atlantic Ocean.

The world's first atomic bomb is detonated at White Sands Proving Ground's Trinity Site on July 16, 1945. A movie concerning this historic event will appear nationally on the PBS network next Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. The film, "The Day after Trinity," focuses on the work of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, who led the Manhattan Project scientists who developed the atomic bomb in the latter days of World War II. The film was nominated for an Academy Award as best documentary feature of 1980. Locally, "The Day after Trinity" will appear on KRWG-TV in Las Cruces (Channel 22) and KCOS-TV in El Paso (Channel 7).

Vietnam Veteran Day approved

President Reagan has approved legislation to proclaim Sunday, April 26 "National Recognition Day for Veterans of the Vietnam Era."

During previous observances, this occasion was known as "Vietnam Veterans Day." The result of a joint resolution approved by Congress on March 31, this year's acknowledgement is formally designated "Public Law 97-9."

The new law provides for observing the day "with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities, including a week of symposia hearings and conferences to be conducted in Washington, D.C., dedicated to those issues of concern to Vietnam veterans." (ARNews)

Electrical Safety is Kid Stuff... And Yours too!

From toddlers to senior citizens, we ALL need to practice electrical safety.

Electricity is a good reliable servant, but if used carelessly, electricity can zap the hand it serves.

One of the first things your child should learn is proper respect for electricity. That's something we never outgrow...the need to practice good electrical safety habits. So begin now by calling The Electric Company. We'll send you a copy of our "Plug in to Safety" booklet.

If you would like to have a safety program given to your group or school, please call The Electric Company at 543-2050 in El Paso or 526-5551 in Las Cruces.

FROM FIRST NATIONAL

HOW TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT CHECKING ACCOUNT.

First National's Interest Checking pays 5¼% annual interest on every dollar in your account, and there's no maintenance charge when your monthly balance is $1500 or more. If you don't choose to keep a high balance in checking, you'll probably do better with regular checking plus regular savings. Or it might pay you to arrange for automatic transfer of funds from regular savings to regular checking. Ask us for details.
